

AMPLIFYING STUDENT VOICE: IDENTITY, COMMUNITY, AND AGENCY → JANUARY 10, 2026

- 3 hours

This is a critical time for creating classrooms that support all of our students. We must move away from a “standardized” means of instruction to one that honors students’ unique talents and ways of seeing the world.

Habla was designed to exist in an interstitial space between cultures, countries, and languages. For eighteen years Habla’s educators have piloted ways of building cross-cultural communities in which students’ voices are valued. This session will be a “greatest hits” of Habla practices that are critical in designing and facilitating a multimodal, student-centered environment.

This session is open to teachers of all subject-areas and grade levels from pre-school to higher education. Participants will receive all session materials—handouts, slide decks, readings. No prior preparation is necessary.
